

Gold Systems Launches LearningZen, a Free Online Education and Training Community

Salt Lake City, Utah April 16, 2009 -- Gold Systems Inc., has launched the beta site of a new online training and education community. LearningZen is a revolutionary service in the e-Learning market place that enables anyone with Internet access to create educational and training content, deliver content to a specific audience and certify compliance at no cost to the trainer or the student. The service was created with the idea that training can and should be in the public domain and that individuals and organizations can realize their potential through education and training.

LearningZen also offers low-cost premium services for organizations that need to control access to proprietary and confidential information.

Many of these training needs must be met regardless of funding availability. A hosted educational portal allows an organization to provide training and certification at a fraction of the cost. LearningZen is a high-quality solution that meets these needs. Businesses, government agencies and non-profit organizations look to training for a multitude of purposes including industry specific training, compliance, sales, customer relationship management and information technology systems.

"In the current economic climate, businesses, government agencies and non-profit organizations are required to do more with less and are seeking more cost-effective solutions than standard learning management systems," said Dennis Phillips, Ph.D. and Chief Executive Officer of Gold Systems. "Many of these training needs must be met regardless of funding availability. A hosted educational portal allows an organization to provide training and certification at a fraction of the cost. LearningZen is a high-quality solution that meets these needs."
